Click on the name of a cache that sounds interesting and of an appropriate difficulty.

Note that difficulty is rated on a 1-5 scale and terrain is given a separate 1-5 scale. A cache with a difficulty of 1 and a terrain of 4 might require a long or strenuous hike but the cache box would be easy to find once you are there.

A green box indicates that this is a "regular" geocache and has a container hidden at the location. Two yellow boxes indicates that there are multiple steps before finding the container. An envelope means that the geocache is also a letterbox which is a type of cache that is popular in Europe. A ghost icon means the cache is virtual. There is no container but there is something to see or do at the listed coordinates. Virtual caches are being phased out of geocaching. A question mark cache can be very difficult. The listed coordinates are NOT where the cache is hidden. Cachers must solve a puzzle or problem to determine the coordinates for the cache. A globe icon in front of a cache listing is for an Earthcache. There are no containers at Earthcaches but visitors are required to answer questions about the geology of the area and post photographs.

This is the 2nd of Queenfish's holiday caches. It was supposed to be 3rd, but Santa was a bit busy around Christmas time. Starting with this cache, these caches will remain year round for everyone to enjoy.

Queenfish talked with the Easter Bunny recently. The Easter Bunny had some extra eggs that needed to be hidden and RRRRRRRRRRRrrrrrrrrrrrr,, didn't find it. We must have been turned around. We couldn't find any steel pipe. We looked high and low. Then our GPS,,, (it leaves a lot to be desired anyway) started doing a tailspin. We searched for at least 2 hours with no luck. We will be back again!
