About the Degree

The Division of Finance and Economics offers students in the College of Liberal Arts the opportunity to earn a B.A. degree in Economics. Students who choose the Economics major will develop their ability to analyze economic problems and issues and will gain a deeper understanding of the operation of the U.S. economy and others around the world. As a result, they will be able to participate more effectively in the decision-making processes of society. This degree is also excellent as a second major for a student in the College of Liberal Arts.

The Curriculum

The curriculum is designed to help students learn about such subjects as fluctuations in a country's level of production, its rate of inflation, and its unemployment rate; the factors driving economic growth; the distribution of resources and income across individuals in a society; international trade and financial flows; economic development locally, regionally, and around the globe, and managerial decision-making. Students who major in Economics will gain the preparation necessary for:

1. Administrative, analyst, and/or research positions with private business firms, government agencies, or private foundations;
2. Law School, MBA programs, and/or Graduate School in International Affairs and/or Economics.
