The Journal of Rural Community Psychology is published by the Fresno Campus of the California School of Professional Psychology, 1350 M Street, Fresno, CA 93721. It is committed to theory development and research in the area of rural psychology. The Journal publishes empirical, theoretical, and review articles concerned with human behavior in rural environments and with the nature and outcome of psychological interventions in rural settings. Research from other disciplines is appropriate when the relevance to the field of rural community psychology is made clear.

Guidelines for Contributors:

Manuscripts should be submitted in triplicate.
