

Government Documents Department

Special Handout History Bibliography

General Information:

Late in the 1800, the U.S. Congress recognized the importance of citizen access to governmental information by establishing the Depository Library Program. In this program, designated libraries throughout the country receive government publications free of charge. These publications come in many formats including paper, maps, video and audiotapes, microforms, diskettes, CDs, and Internet files.

The James E. Morrow Library at Marshall University became a selective depository library in 1925. The primary mission of our department is to select, process, organize, and provide free access to U.S. government publication in support of Marshall University mission and curriculum.

Federal documents are kept in the Superintendent of Documents classification system. This means that documents are arranged by publishing or producing agency NOT by subject like the rest of Marshall University Libraries collections.

Our department hours are slightly different than Drinko library hours. For the Fall and Spring of this academic year, the department is open from 8:00 a.m. - 8:00 p.m. Monday-Wednesday, 8:00 a.m. – 4:30 p.m. Thursday & Friday, closed Saturday, and Sunday from 2:00 p.m.-6:00 p.m.

Finding Documents:

To find government documents, you may search the following online and printed indexes and databases available through MU libraries:

MU Catalog: An online catalog that includes the holdings of MU libraries including a good number of government documents <http://mulibiiidb.marshall.edu/search/X>

Marcive: An online catalog of government publications published from 1976-present <http://www.marcive.com/webdocs/webdocs.dll>

GPO ACCESS: The official home page of the government printing office with links to various government agencies and databases. <http://www.gpoaccess.gov/index.html>

The Monthly Catalog of the United States Publications (MOCAT): The oldest and most comprehensive index to government publications. Available from 1776-present in different formats including paper, microfiche, and Web Access <http://catalog.gpo.gov/F>

Selected Government Documents Titles for History Classes & History Majors:

The following is a selected list with main call numbers and a very brief description to each source. Please note that GPO has a tendency to change call numbers for their publications. Please check with our staff for assistance
