

SuperNova

Lyrics by Susan Krichbaum

Tune by Mark Bates

He sips cold coffee from a dirty cup.
It's hard to keep his courage up,
Starin' down the Supernova.

She turns her eyes to the empty wall.
There's nothin' there to break her fall,
Tearin' down the Supernova.

Chorus:

He thinks it's too late,
She's sure he's gone too far,
But they both bear the mark of one bright burning star
He may be right ;
She may be wrong,
Or maybe, just maybe, they're way too far gone
Supernova.

He's standin' beside the girl of his dreams.
She's beautifully bright, near perfect it seems
Bearin' down on the Supernova.

She's findin' a man to make her forget.
She'll settle for the one she just met.
Wearin' down the Supernova.

(Brief instrumental break)

He just can't seem to make it work out.
The darkness, it grips him and fills him with doubt,
Starin' down the Supernova.

She just can't seem to get past the past.
She's wrapped up so tight and she's runnin' so fast.
She's gone supernova.

Chorus

He thinks it's too late,
She's sure he's gone too far,
But they both bear the mark of one bright burning star
He may be right,
She may be wrong,
Or maybe, just maybe, they're way too far gone
Supernova.
(Instrumental to fade)
