

Position Title: Assistant Professor of Sociology and Anthropology, College of Liberal Arts.

Position Type: Tenure track position. Salary commensurate with qualifications and experience.

Qualifications: Applicants must have a completed doctoral degree in a relevant academic discipline by time of appointment. The chosen candidate must have a specialization that complements existing faculty and have competency in the field of sex and gender studies, knowledge of theories in this area, and be able to develop courses in this area of Sociology. An ability to teach classes in additional specializations is desired, including, for instance, race and ethnicity and education. Candidates must have interests in international and global issues and processes and expertise in a geographical area not covered by current faculty. An expressed interest in developing and conducting classes with a focus on student research in Appalachia will be considered a plus. Experience with and an interest in developing interdisciplinary programs at Marshall University is highly desired.

Duties: Primary responsibilities include a) teaching core and elective classes in the department's undergraduate and graduate programs as well as contributing to the University's general education curriculum, with its emphasis on a common First Year Seminar and core course that enhance students' critical thinking; b) maintaining an active program of research; and c) service activities.

Application Procedure: Submit vita, transcripts of graduate work, letter of application indicating teaching interests, areas of research and professional experience, one writing sample, plus three reference letters to Associate Professor Frederick Roth, Search Committee Chair, Department of Sociology and Anthropology, Marshall University, One John Marshall Drive, Huntington, WV 25755. Electronic submission of application materials and/or inquiries about the position may be sent to roth@marshall.edu.

Application Deadline: Position is open until filled.

Search Number: 12311

Date Published: 11/24/2009

Background Check Required: YES