HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEB. 20, 1865.—Read first and second times, and ordered to be printed.

[By Mr. Perkins, from Committee of Foreign Affairs.]

JOINT RESOLUTIONS

Expressing the sense of Congress on the subject of the late Peace Commission.

1 Whereas the Congress of the Confederate States have ever been desirous of an honorable and a permanent settlement, by negotiation, of all matters of difference between the people of the Confederate States of America and the government of the United States, and to this end provided, immediately on its assembling at Montgomery in February 1861, for the sending of three commissioners to Washington to negotiate friendly relations on all questions of disagreement between the two governments on principles of right, justice, equity and good faith: And whereas these having been refused a reception, Congress again, on the 14th of June 1864, adopted and published a manifesto to the civilized world, declaring its continued desire to settle without further shedding of blood, upon honorable terms, all questions at issue between the people of the Confederate States and those of the United States, to which the only response received from the Congress of the United States has been the voting down, by large majorities, all resolutions proposing an amicable settlement of existing difficulties: And whereas the President has communicated to this House, that in the same spirit of conciliation and peace, he recently sent Vice-President Stephens, Senator Hunter and Judge Campbell, to hold conference with such persons as the government of the United States might designate to meet them: And whereas those eminent citizens, after a full conference with President Lincoln and Secretary Seward, have reported that they were informed explicitly that the authorities of the United States would hold no negotiation with the Confederate States, or any of them separately; that no terms, except such as a conqueror grants to the subjugated, would be extended to the people of these states; and that the subversion of our institutions, and a complete submission to their rule, was the only condition of peace: Therefore,

Resolved by the Congress of the Confederate States of America, That while Congress regrets that no alternative is left to the people of the Confederate States but a continuance of the war, or submission to terms of peace alike ruinous and dishonorable, it accepts, in their behalf, the issue tendered them by the authorities of the United States government, and solemnly declares that it is their unalterable determination to prosecute the war with the United States until that power shall desist from its efforts to subjugate them, and the independence of the Confederate States shall have been established.
Resolved, That the Congress has received with pride the numerous noble and patriotic resolutions passed by the army; and in the gallant and unconquered spirit which they breathe, coming from those who have for years endured dangers and privations, it sees unmistakable evidence that the enthusiasm with which they first dedicated their lives to the defence of their country is not yet extinct, but has been confirmed, by hardships and suffering, into a principle of resistance to northern rule, that will hold in contempt all disgraceful terms of submission; and for these expressions in camp, as well as for their noble acts in the field, our soldiers deserve, and will receive the thanks of the country.

Resolved, That the Congress invites the people of these States to assemble in public meetings, and renew their vows of devotion to the cause of independence; to declare their determination to maintain their liberties; to pledge themselves to do all in their power to fill the ranks of our army; and to provide for the support of the families of our soldiers; and to cheer and comfort, by every means, the gallant men who for years, through trials and dangers, have vindicated our rights on the battle field.

Resolved, That, confiding in the justice of our cause, aided and sustained by the God of battles; in the valor and endurance of our soldiers, and in the deep and ardent devotion of our people to the great principles of civil and political liberty, for which we are contending, Congress pledges itself to the passage of the most energetic measures, to secure our ultimate success.
AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. GILMER.

Resolved further, that notwithstanding all this, we believe that the Confederate States would consent and agree to the following:

1st. That there be a separation between the United States of America and the Confederate States of America—each one perfectly free and independent of the other; the rights of navigation, trade, transit, &c. properly and fairly agreed on and settled.

2d. That an American Diet be created, to which each party shall be at liberty to send Delegates, each being its own judge as to the number and manner of electing them, and each party paying all its own expenses.

3d. The privileges of this Diet to be clearly and definitely defined and settled.

4th. In this Diet there shall be but two votes—one by the Delegates of the United States of America, and one by the Delegates of the Confederate States of America; and the acts of this body to be binding on the parties only when ratified by the House, Senate and President of each.

5th. In settling the boundary, let the States of Kentucky and Missouri determine for themselves, by a free and fair vote of their people, bona fide resident in their respective States at the commencement of hostilities.