

Joan C. Edwards School of Medicine

Established in the mid-1970's, the School of Medicine quickly became a force in improving both health care and educational opportunities for West Virginians. The School's curriculum prepares students for all medical specialties. However, because of the state's continuing shortage of physicians in primary-care specialties (such as general internal medicine and family practice), Marshall particularly emphasizes the special personal and medical skills needed for such fields.

The school is affiliated with Cabell Huntington Hospital, the Veterans Affairs Medical Center, St. Mary's Hospital, and University Physicians and Surgeons, the faculty practice group. Through a network of other agreements, the school also provides health care at sites as varied as Huntington State Hospital and small rural clinics.

The result is a dynamic educational setting which exposes students to the full spectrum of medical care. They work in rural outpatient clinics as well as on busy hospital medical and surgical services. They choose from a variety of primary-care and specialty electives at Marshall, at other medical centers, and in numerous overseas locations.

The School of Medicine is accredited by the Liaison Committee on Medical Education of the American Medical Association and the Association of American Medical Colleges. Information concerning admission may be found in the School of Medicine Bulletin.

The school of Medicine offers the Doctor of Medicine degree, and the Bachelor of Social Work program is also housed in the School of Medicine.

Introduction

The B.S.W. degree is a professional degree allowing the student to enter an exciting and growing field. Social workers practice in a variety of settings such as human service agencies, nursing homes, hospitals, schools, group homes, mental health centers, foster care agencies, and probation offices. Social workers work with individuals, families, groups, institutions, and communities and continually work to improve social conditions. The mission of the Marshall University Social Work Program is to prepare students for beginning level of practice as social work generalists with an understanding and appreciation of the population and institutions of Appalachia.

The Social Work Department is administratively housed in the Marshall University School of Medicine.
