MS Health Informatics Program Awarded Successful Reaccreditation

We are proud to announce that the Commission on Accreditation for Health Informatics and Information Management Education (CAHIIM) has voted to award Continuing Accreditation for seven years to our Health Informatics Program. The program's next comprehensive review for continuing accreditation will be in 2032-2033.

This recognition ensures that our curriculum continues to meet the highest standards of quality and industry relevance, preparing students for impactful careers in the evolving field of health informatics.

Graduate Hooding Ceremony

MBA Students Visit Italy

A group of five MBA students (Chloe Gilkerson, Tennia Dennis, Masden Ball, Ethan Starkey, and Kyrah Williams) are currently in Rome, Italy, taking part in an incredible opportunity to immerse themselves in Roman culture while earning academic credit in Economics.

Led by Dr. Boniface Yemba, the students are collaborating on a project with a local business and an international organization, as well as touring the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) headquarters.

The LCOB Takes on Community Cares Week

Staff and Faculty from the Lewis College of Business weathered the rain and dirt to help give back to our beautiful campus in Marshall's fourth annual Community Cares Week.

Community Cares Week is a four-day sweat equity event focused on engaging faculty, staff, students, community members, local businesses and alumni chapters to help check off "To Do List" items on campus, while giving back to the university that has invested in them, as well.

More pictures of the event can be found here, or read more about Community Cares and its impact by clicking the button below.
