

“I was elated to be receiving a scholarship because I felt undeserving of them. I think scholarships are a great means for students to potentially have some financial freedom while attending Marshall University,” said political science major, Cameron Donohue, and the recipient of the Marshall University Alumni Legacy Scholarship.

A native of Ironton, Ohio, Cameron will graduate in 2022. He intends to pursue law school with the dream of becoming a corporate lawyer. While at Marshall, Cameron is excited to learn about equity and how he can help communities broaden their perspectives to provide more equity and equality to everyone.

“Marshall offered the opportunity of civic engagement, not only in Huntington, but also my hometown,” said Cameron. “I love Marshall’s focus on student involvement, even though this process is still coming to full fruition. Marshall is constantly hosting events to help students get fun activities on campus.”

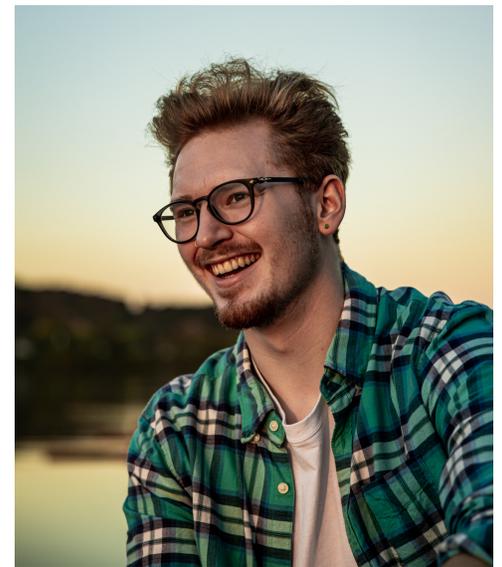

Cameron is a member of Alpha Sigma Phi, a fraternity; Marshall’s Interfraternity Council; Marshall Student Government Association (SGA); Marshall Photography and Video Club and the Fun Club. His favorite place on campus is the SGA office because of the people. Cameron believes the individuals there have helped him immensely grow each semester.

As a college student, Cameron’s biggest struggle has been feeling like time is moving too fast. He believes that, while his schedule is not overly full, the semesters go by quickly and he is quickly approaching graduation. He is thankful for the many supporters in his life.

“If I’m honest with myself, I am my biggest fan, as I am responsible for achieving my goals, and I love that. However, my biggest support system comes from the campus itself, every person is inspiring in their own way, and seeing the way that a lot of students persevere truly helps me appreciate how lucky I am,” Cameron said.

Cameron hopes to make a lasting impression on Marshall and prepare himself for his career. He is thankful that his parents have given him the opportunity to pursue his education and for his friends for inspiring him to continue this journey. He believes that Marshall alumni should give back if possible.

“If alumni give back and are able to impact the life of one student through a donation, then they are changing that student’s life.”

Fun Facts

Name: Cameron Donohue

Class of 2022

Hometown: Ironton, Ohio

Major: Political Science

Favorite color: Tiffany Blue

Textbooks or eBooks: I prefer textbooks for the most part, but some classes are much easier with an eBook.

Favorite thing about Huntington: The sense of community beyond campus. It seems as if everyone in Huntington wants to be involved in the success of Marshall.
