

“Scholarships offer me the ability to attend college. If I were unable to get this scholarship, I would likely be unable to go to college right now or I would have to work for a year or two before saving enough,” said finance major, Trevor Rosenhagen. “I was so excited when I received this scholarship because once I got it, I knew I would be able to attend the school that I always wanted to attend.”

The Scott Depot native is expected to graduate in 2024 and hopes to get involved in the stock market. Choosing his major because of his lifelong interest in numbers, Trevor likes finding “exact answers to problems.” He chose to attend Marshall because of its proximity to home and because of the homey feeling. Now that he is at Marshall, Trevor likes how the campus is set up and that professors care about their students and their learning experiences.

“During the pandemic, the largest adjustment I had to make is getting used to not seeing people. I have always had friends throughout school and with Covid, I have had less opportunities to make friends and spend time with my current friends that attend Marshall,” Trevor said, citing time management as his largest college adjustment.

Trevor enjoys spending time in Drinko Library, where he enjoys studying and completing homework on the top floor. Although not involved in any extracurricular activities, he enjoys playing football and soccer at The Rec. He believes the fact that he is not a procrastinator and always gets his work completed on time is what makes him unique amongst his peers. He looks for friends who deeply care and tries to embody that, as well.

Hoping to succeed in his classes and gain knowledge that helps him become successful. He is thankful for his professors who have been caring and patient during this difficult time and alumni who help students rise.

“Alumni give back because they have been through college and can relate to younger generations. They are able to provide advice and knowledge for students who appreciate it.”

Fun Facts

Name: Trevor Rosenhagen

Class of 2024

Hometown: Scott Depot, West Virginia

Major: Finance

Favorite color: Blue

Textbooks or eBooks: I prefer textbooks. I have always been someone who learns better with something physical.

Favorite thing about Huntington: Right now, my favorite thing about Huntington are the football game days. I enjoy going to watch the games with my friends and other students.