Marshall University is committed to providing a learning environment free from harassment and discrimination. In addition to our self-commitment, we must comply with federal laws preventing harassment and discrimination.

The Title IX Office is primarily concerned with student's safety and well-being and is tasked with investigating all reports of sexual misconduct experienced by our community members. Marshall and Title IX's prohibition of sex discrimination also covers sexual harassment, sexual violence, and any other form of sexual misconduct. If you or someone you know has been impacted by sexual assault, dating and domestic violence, stalking, or sexual exploitation, please visit Marshall's Title IX website to access additional resources and information or contact us at titleix@marshall.edu.

Title IX also prohibits sex-based and gender-based discrimination and harassment, which includes discrimination based on pregnancy and/or pregnancy-related complications, parental status, and marital status. Students expecting, experiencing pregnancy-related complications, or parents to newborn children (under the age of one) are eligible for reasonable accommodations.

- For purposes of Title IX, a “parenting” student (male or female) is interpreted as one who must care for their newborn baby for as long as a doctor deems medically necessary from the time the baby is born. Under current interpretations, a “parenting” student would include the baby’s natural or legally adoptive mother or father.

The Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (“ADA”) and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act (“504”) are also federal civil rights laws and prohibit discrimination on the basis of certain medical disabilities - including complications resulting from pregnancy or childbirth. If you have a qualifying condition/diagnosis, you may also be eligible for services, support, and accommodations through our Office of Accessibility and Accommodations. A separate process exists to apply for services and accommodations through the Office of Accessibility and Accommodations. For more information, you can email wyant2@marshall.edu.

To submit this form and/or questions, please email us at titleix@marshall.edu or the Title IX Office staff member you have been working with regarding your matter.
